

GENERAL STUDIES

The General Studies Associate of Science (AS) degree provides students with comprehensive knowledge and transferable skills across multiple academic disciplines. The coursework is specifically designed to fulfill General Education requirements that align with most Career and Technical Education (CTE) programs at both certificate and Associate of Applied Science levels. This program features a Native American studies focus, making it particularly valuable for students seeking to develop the knowledge and leadership skills necessary for success in diverse career paths.

The degree program prepares graduates for multiple pathways including entry into the global workforce, military service, tribal government positions, or continued pursuit of higher education. Upon completion, graduates will have developed the ability to align their career interests and aptitudes with concrete career planning while successfully achieving their initial academic goal of transferring to a bachelors degree program in their chosen area of study.
